

HUMAN RESOURCES

Non-automated processes in human resources are quickly becoming ineffective. Different roles and media breaks intensify this effect and slow down the entire process run. The use of MMA results ensures the effective execution of HR processes based on the employee's life cycle.

What you get:

- The ability to identify and analyse processes, especially in the administrative area. MMA enables the precise analysis of bottlenecks in the system in order to make them quicker and more efficient; resulting in a clearly defined fast-track route to identifying and optimizing them
- A logically structured, systematized method and approach for the identification, measurement, analysis and review of the results
- Business activities optimized for focus and direction

Typically, areas for process analysis include

- recruitment
- onboarding
- mutations
- off boarding
- payroll
- benefit planning
- personnel development
- organizational development
- health management
- 'brand' building
- social media
- digitization
- etc.
